Subject: EPA: Latest Dimock tests find no major problems

5/11/12 12:17 PM EDT

A fourth set of tests of 12 drinking water wells in Dimock, Pa., did not show contamination levels of concern to EPA, the agency said today. One well did contain elevated levels of methane, the EPA said, and the resident, the state Department of Environmental Protection and the Susquehanna County Emergency Management Agency were informed.
